

Deanna Wehrung currently lives in Las Vegas and is active by any measure. The artist enjoys music festivals, travel, photography and visiting national parks. She is an avid volunteer and has spent the last five summers as a general ranger in Yellowstone National Park. Deanna is also a volunteer with My Cancer Connection at M. D. Anderson Cancer Center. This opportunity connects her with patients living all over the USA. Consulting and supporting other cancer patients has been life changing for Deanna.

These life changing experiences is the inspiration for her blog, Project Ostomy. She also speaks about her journey to various cancer support groups and women's organizations. Her tenacity to make the most out of life with what she's got is contagious to anyone who spends time with her.

To connect with Deanna, visit Project Ostomy on Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram.

